

Dicerandra Scrub Sanctuary

Courtesy of the Brevard County Environmentally Endangered Lands Program

This 44-acre Sanctuary is named after an endangered mint plant, Dicerandra thincicola, also known as Titusville mint. This beautiful shrub has bright purple flowers and is endemic to the Titusville area, which means it is found nowhere else in the world. The Sanctuary also protects scrub, scrubby flatwoods, and depression marshes with the hiking trail leading through the scrubby flatwoods and marsh habitats.

ACTIVITIES

Wildlife Viewing

Hiking

Geocaching

DO'S & DON'TS

Hunting is prohibited

Stay on the trail for personal safety

Pets, smoking, alcohol, and motorized vehicles are prohibited. No Hunting allowed.

Stay on the trail for personal safety and protection of the natural environment.

Removal of plants, animals, archeological, or cultural resources is prohibited.